Guy Fraser Sampson

In recent years, Guy has developed his abiding interest in investment strategy, portfolio theory and asset allocation, and become recognised as an expert and thought leader in the area, particularly in so far as pension funds are concerned. He also, in the course of two and a half years' research for his first book, became an expert on so-called alternative assets generally, and has written and lectured widely on how these might be accommodated into Multi Asset Class products and portfolios.

He is the inventor of the Total Funding Model, by which pension funds may calculate their future liabilities and target rate of return. He has also invented a new way of calculating investment risk which remedies many of the deficiencies of the traditional method. He has previously been responsible for developing many computer models for measuring private equity fund performance, including one specifically for buyout transactions.

Guy is well known as a conference speaker and, increasingly, as a provider of keynote addresses. He is also a prolific writer, having supplied articles for every one of Europe's English language pension publications as well as numerous investment titles, including his regular column in Real Deals, Europe's leading private equity publication. Guy is also the author of two books: Multi Asset Class Investment Strategy and Private Equity as an asset class, both published as part of the prestigious Wiley Finance series, and both featured on this website. Multi Asset Class Investment Strategy was published in July 2006 to what Global Pensions described as "rave reviews from within the UK pension industry" and went into the Amazon "Hot 100" after just six weeks. The Daily Telegraph noted that "the tectonic plates are shifting under the British investment establishment" while one reviewer said simply "there are some books you read that change the way you think - this is one of them." Private Equity as an asset class will be published in the 1st Quarter of 2007. In addition to various professional qualifications, Guy has an LLB with Honours from King's College London and an MBA majoring in finance from Warwick Business School.
